16. Untigerizing through peaceful parenting with Iris Chen

In this episode we talk with Iris Chen about her new book, Untigerizing: Peaceful Parenting for the Deconstructing Tiger Parent. Iris admits to being a parent who engaged in "yelling, spanking, and threatening with unreasonable consequences" – but far from becoming a well-behaved, obedient child, her son fought back. The harder she punished, the more he resisted. Their home became a

To ignore the intersectional identities and experiences of marginalized groups is to co-opt unschooling, peaceful parenting, and the principles of personal freedom to simply benefit yourself, perpetuate oppression, and defend the myth of white supremacy. I'm not here for that.

Untigerer - My author copies have finally arrived!!!

Untigerer is about my awkward, clumsy steps in putting peaceful parenting into practice. I am a recovering overachiever who is unschooling her kids. I was a precocious child who read at an early age, skipped kindergarten, became my high school valedictorian, attended a prestigious university, and graduated with honors... a semester early.
